 Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.
CAPE MAY, N. J., June 13, 1896.
 Ever since its early days of seashore sumacy has this charming resort been so ned with the spirit of progress and ved up with such rosy expectations of a nominal season of prosperity and popuas it is just at present. There is le ground for both conditions. In the place, the improvement bond issue of $100,000 has enabled the city authorities to start a splendid new boardwalk to rethe breezy ocean driveway, to put main avenues in excellent repair, and extend and augment the water supply sewerage system. Add to this the fact that all the roads leading to Cape have been put in faultless condition by cyclists; that the fastest express in the country are now daily run to the cape.

the new South Jersey railroad and West Jersey railroad, both of which close trunk line connections at Philadelphia, and one can readily see the why wherefore of the big stride this famous resort has taken to the front this year. Another substantial sign of Cape May's advance this season is the fact that the latter number of its handsome cottages are already rented to the finest class summer visitors. The majority of these now enjoying the comforts of their seashore homes, and within a few the social circle, for which this resort famous, will be fully made up, after the most delightful social events will w.

family. Madame Patenotre is a daughter of James Elverson, the well-known Philadelphia publisher, and a woman of social attainments. ing in grand style. Invitations have been sent to the President of the United States and various governors and prominent men to be present, and many of them have signified their intention to attend. Along the esplanade from the inlet to the excursion house the amusement places are open, and the four miles of walking is being taken advantage of by more persons than have been seen this early in season any previous year. Hundreds of bathers can be seen every morning and afternoon taking a dip in the Atlantic. This has been a spring of exceptional high tides here, but the contractors have kept the work on the new esplanade well in hand and will complete the structure this summer.

OWNED BY ARTHUR ADDISON. own From a Mettle some Colt at Bar Harbor.
Arthur D. Addison, the well-known popular young Washingtonian, was own from a colt he was breaking at summer home at Bar Harbor, Maine, day afternoon. His head struck with great force against a stone fence, and his skull was fractured. The news of the terrible event was telegraphed to Mr. Franklin Steele, Mr. Addison's brother-in-law, in this city in a brief form yesterday morning. Later in the day another message was received stating that Mr. Addi-skull had been trephined, and that he was conscious after the operation and retained a full recollection of what had occurred. It was also stated that he had shown strong vitality. This information was gratifying to Mr. Steele and the host friends Mr. Addison has in Washington, and gave grounds for strong hope that he could recover from his hurt.

day today there has been a stream of inquisitors at Mr. Addison's office, No. 86 17th street, including all the eminent society people, ladies as well as gentlemen, and numbers of Mr. Addison's business acquaintances, by whom he is so warmly regarded that by those he is intimate with in a social way.

Transportation of Bank Notes.—The United States Treasurer Morgan has issued a circular revoking that of November 1883, which required the charges for the transportation of national bank notes to the treasurer of the United States for retention, under the act of June 20, 1874, to be paid by the senders. The new order will to effect July 1 next. In explanation of this action, it is said at the treasury under the present arrangement, the banks at the eastern money centers are constantly receiving remittances in national bank notes from the country banks, and these notes cannot be used as lawful money. The eastern bankers are compelled and them to the treasury for redemption at their own expense. They complain that this arrangement entails an unjust burden, which should be distributed among banks of issue. This view is shared by treasury officials, and hence the new law. Hereafter, at the end of the year the cost of transporting national bank notes to the treasury for redemption will be borne by the bank.
